Headteacher: Mrs D. Bones

Mission Statement: At Heytesbury School, we believe in helping the whole child to develop within a secure, caring, Christian environment. We strive for every child to be the best they can in three key areas:-

Head

Every child a good learner

We will strive to provide exciting, challenging and motivating learning experiences, where children are valued, successes celebrated, children are encouraged to share their ideas and thinking, and opportunities are created to develop their independence

Heart

Every child knows they are special

Children understand that they are special in a rich, Christian ethos. We will ensure that children feel safe and secure, whilst taking risks in their learning. They will be given opportunities to reflect on their learning, to know how they learn, to have a say in what they're learning and how they are learning

Hands

Every child knows how to be part of a team

We will endeavour to create opportunities to show independence, respect, resilience and appreciation of each other. Children will be given time to reflect and support each other and will understand their role and responsibility for others, living out what it means to be part of a Christian school and community

Positive Behaviour Policy

Written	Dec 2012
Author	Headteacher, ratified by Policy Committee
Next Review	Dec 2013

Good behaviour is conduct which enables the School to fulfill its function, namely, to develop the full potential of pupils. Poor behaviour is conduct which prevents this, either when an individual pupil, by behaving badly, prevents his own development, or when unacceptable conduct disrupts the development process of other members of the School community.

Aims:- The School aims to create a climate in which the following qualities are developed in the children

- To encourage children to have care, consideration and respect for themselves and for their property, and for the physical and intellectual property of others,
- To encourage children to value individual worth
- To encourage pupils to have the confidence and willingness to 'have a go', and to allow mistakes by oneself and others,
- To encourage, trust, independence, openness, a sense of security, initiative, thoughtfulness, co-operation, a sense of community and intellectual honesty.

Objectives

- To develop self-discipline in pupils,
- To create the conditions for an orderly community in which effective learning can take place and in which there is mutual respect amongst members,
- To secure a consistent approach to the maintenance of discipline throughout the school,
- To instill in pupils high standards of behaviour based upon self-respect and respect for the rights and entitlements of others and their environment, thus enabling them to become valuable members of the community.

Rewarding Positive Behaviour

- Children's positive behaviour will be rewarded through children being given stickers or stamps on a record card. Once the record card is complete this is taken to the head teacher who will present a head teacher certificate during the weekly celebration assembly to which parents are invited.
- At the celebration assembly there will be a further award a 'Star of the Week' for each class for children who have achieved or behaved in a way above and beyond expectations
- In each class there can be further incentives to recognize and reward positive behaviour e.g marbles in a jar, house points

In the event of sanctions having to be put in place

A variety of sanctions may be used ranging from a quiet word, to the removal to another area in the classroom, a thinking chair or a focus table, a restriction of privilege, loss of some privilege time or deprivation of playtime, or part of playtime standing with the person on duty for these minutes.

Staff may send a child to another member of staff for admonishment. Staff will support each other in dealing with difficult pupils. The Head teacher may be involved to enforce discipline at any point. The Head teacher will always inform parents if their support is needed in a disciplinary matter. Parents may be informed by telephone or by letter of their child's misbehaviour. This process is put in place for the benefit of those well behaved pupils who find the behaviour of some pupils disruptive and uncomfortable, and therefore is a barrier to learning.

Incidents of bullying will be dealt with according to the school's Anti-Bullying Policy

Use of Force and Restraint

The staff has decided to adopt the guidance from the Department for Education on the 'Use of Reasonable Force'. This guidance is attached below:

About this guidance

This is non-statutory advice from the Department for Education. It is intended to provide clarification on the use of force to help school staff feel more confident about using this power when they feel it is necessary and to make clear the responsibilities of head teachers and governing bodies in respect of this power.

This advice replaces "The use of force to control and restrain pupils – Guidance for schools in England".

Expiry/review date

This advice will be reviewed in spring 2013.

What legislation does this guidance relate to?

Education Act 1996

Education and Inspections Act 2006.

Who is this advice for?

This advice is aimed at governing bodies, head teachers and school staff in all schools

Key points

- School staff have a legal power to use force and lawful use of the power will provide a defence to any related criminal prosecution or other legal action.
- Suspension should not be an automatic response when a member of staff has been accused of using excessive force.
- Senior school leaders should support their staff when they use this power

1 What is reasonable force?

- 1) The term 'reasonable force' covers the broad range of actions used by most teachers at some point in their career that involve a degree of physical contact with pupils.
- 2) Force is usually used either to control or restrain. This can range from guiding a pupil to safety by the arm through to more extreme circumstances such as breaking up a fight or where a student needs to be restrained to prevent violence or injury.
- 3) 'Reasonable in the circumstances' means using no more force than is needed.
- 4) As mentioned above, schools generally use force to control pupils and to restrain them. Control means either passive physical contact, such as standing between pupils or blocking a pupil's path, or active physical contact such as leading a pupil by the arm out of a classroom.
- 5) Restraint means to hold back physically or to bring a pupil under control. It is typically used in more extreme circumstances, for example when two pupils are fighting and refuse to separate without physical intervention.
- 6) School staff should always try to avoid acting in a way that might cause injury, but in extreme cases it may not always be possible to avoid injuring the pupil.

2 Who can use reasonable force?

- 1) All members of school staff have a legal power to use reasonable force (as defined in section 93 of the Education and Inspections Act 2006)
- 2) This power applies to any member of staff at the school. It can also apply to people whom the head teacher has temporarily put in charge of pupils such as unpaid volunteers or parents accompanying students on a school organised visit.

3 When can reasonable force be used?

- 1) Reasonable force can be used to prevent pupils from hurting themselves or others, from damaging property or from causing disorder.

- 2) In a school, force is used for two main purposes – to control pupils or to restrain them.
- 3) The decision on whether or not to physically intervene is down to the professional judgement of the staff member concerned and should always depend on the individual circumstances.
- 4) The following list is not exhaustive but provides some examples of situations where reasonable force can and cannot be used.

Schools can use reasonable force to:

- remove disruptive children from the classroom where they have refused to follow an instruction to do so;
- prevent a pupil behaving in a way that disrupts a school event or a school trip or visit;
- prevent a pupil leaving the classroom where allowing the pupil to leave would risk their safety or lead to behaviour that disrupts the behaviour of others;
- prevent a pupil from attacking a member of staff or another pupil, or to stop a fight in the playground; and
- restrain a pupil at risk of harming themselves through physical outbursts.

Schools cannot:

- use force as a punishment – it is always unlawful to use force as a punishment.

4. Power to search pupils without consent

- 1) In addition to the general power to use reasonable force described above, head teachers and authorised staff can use such force as is reasonable given the circumstances to conduct a search for the following “prohibited items” (Section 550ZB(5) of the Education Act 1996)
 - knives and weapons
 - alcohol
 - illegal drugs
 - stolen items
 - tobacco and cigarette papers
 - fireworks
 - pornographic images
 - any article that has been or is likely to be used to commit an offence, cause personal injury or damage to property.

Force cannot be used to search for items banned under the school rules.

Separate guidance is available on the power to search without consent – see the Associated Resources section for a link to this document

5 Communicating the school's approach to the use of force

- 1) Every school is required by law to have a behaviour policy and to make this policy known to staff, parents and pupils. The governing body should notify the head teacher that it expects the school behaviour policy to include the power to use reasonable force.
- 2) There is no legal requirement to have a policy on the use of force but it is good practice to set out, in the behaviour policy, the circumstances in which force might be used. For example, it could say that teachers will physically separate pupils found fighting or that if a pupil refuses to leave a room when instructed to do so, they will be physically removed.
- 3) Any policy on the use of reasonable force should acknowledge their legal duty to make reasonable adjustments for disabled children and children with special educational needs (SEN).
- 4) Schools do not require parental consent to use force on a student.
- 5) Schools should not have a 'no contact' policy. There is a real risk that such a policy might place a member of staff in breach of their duty of care towards a pupil, or prevent them taking action needed to prevent a pupil causing harm.
- 6) By taking steps to ensure that staff, pupils and parents are clear about when force might be used, the school will reduce the likelihood of complaints being made when force has been used properly

6 Using force

A panel of experts (Physical Control in Care Medical Panel - 2008) identified that certain restraint techniques presented an unacceptable risk when used on children and young people. The techniques in question are:

- the 'seated double embrace' which involves two members of staff forcing a person into a sitting position and leaning them forward, while a third monitors breathing;
- the 'double basket-hold' which involves holding a person's arms across their chest; and
- the 'nose distraction technique' which involves a sharp upward jab under the nose.

7 Staff training

- 1) Schools need to take their own decisions about staff training. The head teacher should consider whether members of staff require any additional training to enable them to carry out their responsibilities and should consider the needs of the pupils when doing so.
- 2) Some local authorities provide advice and guidance to help schools to develop an appropriate training programme.

8 Telling parents when force has been used on their child

- 1) It is good practice for schools to speak to parents about serious incidents involving the use of force and to consider how best to record such serious incidents. It is up to schools to decide whether it is appropriate to report the use of force to parents / carers
- 2) In deciding what is a serious incident, teachers should use their professional judgement and consider the:
 - pupil's behaviour and level of risk presented at the time of the incident;
 - degree of force used;
 - effect on the pupil or member of staff; and
 - the child's age.

9 What happens if a pupil complains when force is used on them?

- 1) All complaints about the use of force should be thoroughly, speedily and appropriately investigated.
- 2) Where a member of staff has acted within the law – that is, they have used reasonable force in order to prevent injury, damage to property or disorder – this will provide a defence to any criminal prosecution or other civil or public law action.
- 3) When a complaint is made the onus is on the person making the complaint to prove that his/her allegations are true – it is not for the member of staff to show that he/she has acted reasonably.
- 4) Suspension must not be an automatic response when a member of staff has been accused of using excessive force. Schools should refer to the “Dealing with Allegations of Abuse against Teachers and Other Staff” guidance (see Associated Resources section below) where an allegation of using excessive force is made against a teacher. This guidance makes clear that a person must not be suspended automatically, or without careful thought.
- 5) Schools must consider carefully whether the circumstances of the case warrant a person being suspended until the allegation is resolved or whether alternative arrangements are more appropriate.
- 6) If a decision is taken to suspend a teacher, the school should ensure that the teacher has access to a named contact who can provide support.
- 7) Governing bodies should always consider whether a teacher has acted within the law when reaching a decision on whether or not to take disciplinary action against the teacher.
- 8) As employers, schools and local authorities have a duty of care towards their employees. It is important that schools provide appropriate pastoral care to any member of staff who is subject to a formal allegation following a use of force incident.

10 What about other physical contact with pupils?

1) It is not illegal to touch a pupil. There are occasions when physical contact, other than reasonable force, with a pupil is proper and necessary.

2) Examples of where touching a pupil might be proper or necessary:

- Holding the hand of the child at the front/back of the line when going to assembly or when walking together around the school;
- When comforting a distressed pupil;
- When a pupil is being congratulated or praised;
- To demonstrate how to use a musical instrument;
- To demonstrate exercises or techniques during PE lessons or sports coaching; and
- To give first aid.

Frequently Asked Questions

I'm worried that if I use force a pupil or parent could make a complaint against me.

Am I protected?

Yes, if you have acted lawfully. If the force used is reasonable all staff will have a robust defence against any accusations.

How do I know whether using a physical intervention is 'reasonable'?

The decision on whether to physically intervene is down to the professional judgement of the teacher concerned. Whether the force used is reasonable will always depend on the particular circumstances of the case. The use of force is reasonable if it is proportionate to the consequences it is intended to prevent. This means the degree of force used should be no more than is needed to achieve the desired result. School staff should expect the full backing of their senior leadership team when they have used force.

What about school trips?

The power may be used where the member of staff is lawfully in charge of the pupils, and this includes while on school trips.

Can force be used on pupils with SEN or disabilities?

Yes, but the judgement on whether to use force should not only depend on the circumstances of the case but also on information and understanding of the needs of the pupil concerned.

I'm a female teacher with a Year 10 class - there's no way I'd want to restrain or try to control my pupils. Am I expected to do so?

There is a power, not a duty, to use force so members of staff have discretion whether or not to use it. However, teachers and other school staff have a duty of care towards their pupils and it might be argued that failing to take action (including a failure to use reasonable force) may in some circumstances breach that duty.

Are there any circumstances in which a teacher can use physical force to punish a pupil?

No. It is always unlawful to use force as a punishment. This is because it would fall within the definition of corporal punishment, which is illegal

Exclusions

Exclusion will take place as a result of a serious breach of discipline which has arisen at school. Only the Head-teacher has the right to exclude a pupil. Exclusion will be enforced when other pupils or members of staff are deemed to be seriously affected by that pupil's presence in school.

Exclusion from Heytesbury School is a punishment. The parents, guardians or child minder need to support the school's decision and according to recent legislation, the child must not be found in a public place during the exclusion period or parents may be subject to a fixed penalty notice.

The school will supply the 'carer' with work that the child should complete in order that time out is not perceived by the child as an 'easy option'.

Fixed Term Exclusion

For between 1 and 15 days depending on the seriousness of the offence.

1. The parents of the pupil will be informed that the pupil has been excluded and why. This will be done immediately by telephone if possible and then confirmed in writing. Parents will be informed of the period of exclusion and the reason for it. A proforma will be sent to the Chair of Governors and the LA.
2. The parents will be informed in the letter, that they may make representations about the exclusion to the Governing Body. Parents have the right to attend an exclusion meeting with governors and the letter will tell parents who to contact and will invite them to write asking for a meeting.
3. If parents reply saying they wish to meet with the Governors a meeting will be set up preferably on the day the pupil returns to school. They may bring a 'friend' to the meeting to support them. The purpose of this meeting is to explore the support that the school and the parents need to give the child to help improve his/her behaviour and for the parents to raise any concerns with the governors.

Returning to School

When the excluded pupil returns to school, there will be a 're-entry' interview with the pupil and his/her parents, class teacher, Head-teacher and probably a governor.

Both the school and the parents will agree the support the child needs to help improve his/her behaviour and if necessary a 'Behaviour Plan' will be drawn up between the School, the family and the pupil.

Permanent Exclusion

Permanent exclusion will result for very serious breaches of the behaviour code or continuous flouting of the code, which would seriously harm the education or welfare of the pupil or others in the school if s/he were allowed to remain.

1. The school will inform the parents by telephone that the pupil has been excluded and why, and will be asked to collect the pupil from the school. The exclusion will be confirmed in writing. Proformas will be sent to the Chairman of Governors and the LA.
2. The parents may make representations about the permanent exclusion to the Governing Body who will set up a meeting of their Disciplinary Committee (consisting of 3 governors) to review the case. An LA representative will attend this meeting. All paperwork, including witness statements, will be sent to all involved in the case prior to the meeting.

The Disciplinary Committee will decide to either uphold the Head-teacher's decision or rescind it. If it is upheld the parents have the right to appeal to the LA.
